

Miyagase Dam is one of Kanagawa Prefecture's most impressive dams. It plays a vital role in supplying water to the greater Tokyo area, while also serving as a popular sightseeing spot where visitors can enjoy beautiful scenery throughout the year.

The highlight of a visit is the scheduled water release. From a height of about 70 meters, a huge volume of water cascades down the dam, creating a powerful curtain of spray. On sunny days, a rainbow may appear in the mist. Walking paths and viewing areas provide various perspectives of both the dam and the lake.

Lakeside facilities such as restaurants, shops, and sightseeing boat piers make Miyagase Dam an enjoyable destination for families and travelers seeking a blend of nature and engineering.
